IN THE NAME of Allah, Most Gracious Most Merciful. All praise be to Allah, as much as is His right to be praised. And peace and blessings be upon Muhammad, His Messenger and slave, and upon his Family and his Companions after him.

To proceed: You who are desirous of acquiring sacred knowledge, expressing in yourself a sincere longing and a passionate thirst for it, know that if your aim in seeking knowledge is to compete, show off, outdo your peers, garner attention, and amass the debris of this world, then you are on your way to rendering your religion null and void, destroying yourself, and selling your eternal life for this present one.

Your transaction is empty, your business profitless. And the person who teaches you in this case is nothing less than an accomplice in your transgression, a partner in your loss. He can be compared to one who sells a sword to a highway robber, for as the Messenger of Allah ﷺ said, “Indeed, whoever helps with a sin by even half a word is a partner in it” (ʿIrāqī from Musnad al-Daylami).

But if, in seeking knowledge, your intention and aim, between Allah Most High and yourself, is to gain guidance, and not simply the transmission of information, then glad tidings be to you. The angels will spread their wings for you as you walk and the fish in the sea will ask forgiveness for you as you strive.

You should know before all else that guidance, which is the fruit of knowledge, has a beginning and an end, an outward aspect and an inward essence.
There is no way to reach the end without mastering the beginning, just as there is no way to discover the inner essence of it until you have arrived at an understanding of its outward.

Here I am going to point you to the “beginning of guidance,” for you to see where you stand and determine what your heart intends. If you find your heart inclining toward it, and you find yourself complacent and receptive, then look to the ends of it, and immerse yourself in the oceans of this knowledge.

If, on the other hand, you find that in taking stock of it, your heart puts off starting it, or asks for more time in responding to its demands, then know that the part of your lower self wanting knowledge is the self that commands to evil, which has risen up out of obedience to the accursed Satan. Satan’s strategy is to throw to you the rope of deceit, then pull you in by it to the abyss of destruction; his intention is to present evil in the form of good until he succeeds in making you of “those who lose the most in respect of their deeds, whose efforts have been wasted in this life, while they reckon that they do good work” (Qur’an 18:103–4).

At this point, Satan will recite to you the excellence of knowledge and the high rank of the scholars, and all that has been related about it in ḥadīths and other narrations. And he so will divert you from the warning of the Prophet ﷺ: “He who increases in knowledge, but not in guidance, increases only in distance from Allāh Most High” (ʿIrāqī from Musnad al-Daylāmī); and this one: “Of those most severely punished on the Day of Judgment is the knowledgeable person whom Allāh did not benefit through his knowledge” (Shuʿab al-Īmān) (he ﷺ would supplicate [for protection] thus: “I seek refuge in You from knowledge that does not benefit, a heart that does not fear, a deed that does not ascend, and an invocation that is not heard” (Ḥākim)); and from this one: “On the night of my ascension to the heavens, I passed by people whose lips were being cut by pincers from the Hellfire. So I asked, ‘Who are you?’ They replied, ‘We used to order people to do good and not do it ourselves, and advise people against evil, even as we were doing it ourselves’” (ʿIrāqī from Ibn Ḥibbān; similar in Ahmad).

Then beware, O destitute one, of following Satan’s disingenuous advice and being roped in by his deceit.
